

1. Deep learning is a subset of machine learning using neutral networks with multiple layers to analyze complex data.
2. Machine learning uses algorithms, while deep learning uses neutral networks with multiple layers.
3. A neutral network is computational model inspired by the human brain's structure.
4. Back propagation is an optimization algorithm, adjusting neutral network weights.
5. Activation functions introduce non-linearity, enabling neutral networks to learn complex patterns.